Nazi Raiders Loose Fiercest Incendiary Assault Of The War

600,000 GERMANS

RAF Blasts Back At Enemy: Hits Coast Ports And Naples, Italy

(By Associated Press)
Dynamite and water pumped from the Thames river helped check a raging inferno today in the ancient "City" of London—the Empire capital's Wall Street—after Nazi raiders fire-bombed the metropolis in the fiercest incendiary assault of the war.
Blindly, the British government accused Germany of a "deliberate attempt" to burn the city without regard for military objectives.
In southeast Europe, Balkan nerves frayed as thousands of German troops moved across Rumania right up to the border of Bulgaria—possible gateway to Greece, to Turkey, or to the Russian-dominated Black sea.

600,000 Soldiers, Estimate
Estimates of Nazi troops involved in the huge-scale maneuver simultaneously leaped from the original 300,000 to 600,000.

British warplanes countered the devastating attack on London by raiding unspecified targets in Germany, as well as again pounding the Nazi "invasion" ports, and struck at Naples, Italy.

Premier Mussolini's high command reported seven persons killed and several wounded as the British bombers roared over Naples in two waves, dropping propaganda leaflets as well as explosives.

In the two-week-old siege of Bardia, Libya, where 20,000 Italians still held out, the British reported "comparatively little response from the Italian garrison" under heavy shelling from British gun crews.

The attack on London lasted from dusk to midnight, when the capital's thunderous anti-aircraft barrage suddenly halted and the fighter planes climbed into the blood-red skies to engage the raiders.

A. P. Building Destroyed
The Associated Press building in Tudor street, between "Newspaper Row" on Fleet street and the Thames, was destroyed. None of the 12 staff members on duty in the five-story building at the time was injured, and temporary quarters were quickly established elsewhere.

NATION'S DEFENSE OUTPUT GROWING

Million Put To Work In Two Months, More Will Be Needed

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 30. — The defense commission reported today that the nation's arms output was up to 2,400 aircraft factories, 700 planes, more than 10,000 semi-automatic rifle and 100 tanks a month. The defense program, the commission said, already had put a million persons to work in the last two months, and "several million more will be needed by next November."

The agency likewise reported that it had approved contracts totaling more than ten billion dollars and that the army and navy had awarded nine tenths of these, including $3,300,000,000 for ships, $1,500,000,000 for factory expansion and housing, $1,500,000,000 for planes and parts, $600,000,000 for ammunition, $500,000,000 for guns and $40,000,000 for trucks and tanks.

These contracts, plus those placed by the British and other nations, commit American industry to produce 500,000 airplanes and 130,000 airplane engines, 9,200 tanks; 2,055,000 guns of all kinds and their ammunition; 380 navy ships; 200 mercantile ships; 210 camps and cantonments; clothing and equipment for 1,200,000 men; 50,000 trucks.

Also under contract are 40 government factories, among them the first mass production tank factory in the world, five explosive plants, six ammunition plants, five machine gun plants.

Gun contracts embrace 400,000 automatic rifles, 1,300,000 regular rifles, 17,000 heavy guns, 25,000 light guns, 13,000 trench mortars, 300,000 machine guns. Other contracts call for 33,000,000 loaded shells.

Another item was that a new fighting ship goes down the ways every 12 days to join the navy.

RAIN AND TRAFFIC BOOST AUTO TOLL ON OHIO HIGHWAYS

Salem District, However, Free Of Injuries Over Weekend

The fifth consecutive day of rain came to Ohio today and wet pavements and heavy traffic combined to rocket the state's holiday toll of the highways toward the 100 mark. The Salem district, however, was free of injury accidents over the weekend despite last night's snowfall. Salem state highway patrolmen investigated several minor collisions Saturday and one Sunday.

Yesterday's accident occurred at the intersection of Routes 7 and 14 east of Columbiana and involved machines driven by Howard Thompson, 41, of R. D. 2, Warren, and Charles Mott, 31, of New Castle, Pa.

Five motorists were charged with reckless driving by the state patrol. Charles Yantovich of Alliquippa, Pa., forfeited $15 bond in Mayor Norman Phillips' court here for no-appearance yesterday on a reckless driving charge. Mike Zimmerman of Salem drew a fine of 10 and costs after having been arrested on a charge of reckless driving.

Glen Mercer of R. D. 2, Salem, charged by the patrol with failure to observe a stop sign, was fined $5 and costs by Mayor Phillips. Donald Deemer of Youngstown and Donald Jones of East Palestine, each charged with reckless operation, were fined $10 and costs apiece by Mayor Arthur Myers at Columbiana.

Joseph Sanders of Cleveland was jailed at Alliance last night by the patrol following his arrest on a charge of reckless driving.

Continued rain and melting snow caused streams to overflow their banks in lowland areas throughout the state. A few roads were reported inundated. The Mahoning river rose to flood fields along Route 62 just east of Alliance.

The Ohio river was expected to reach a 21-foot crest at East Liverpool tonight—the highest for the season, but 11 feet under flood stage. Attendants at Dam 8 said the river was falling above Pittsburgh.

Stock Perishes In Fire At Deerfield; Loss High

Fifteen head of cattle and five horses perished in a fire which destroyed a barn at the W. H. Bawley farm, one-half mile south of Deerfield, along Route 14, early Sunday morning.

Total damage caused by the fire, which also destroyed three out-buildings, was estimated at $10,000 by Fire Chief Frank Timmer of Sebring. The Sebring department was called at 5:30 a. m. A short-circuit in the electric wiring was blamed for the blaze.

A quantity of equipment in the barn was lost.

INCREASED AID FOR BRITAIN HINTED IN ROOSEVELT TALK

NAZI LEADER IS SILENT ON FDR'S SPEECH

Berlin Papers Use Brief Summary: Omit Defeat Prediction

ANOTHER WARNING

Japan Sees Talk As Commitment To Further Assist China

(By Associated Press)
President Roosevelt's address on world hostilities was greeted today with outspoken satisfaction in London, studied silence in Berlin and a charge from Rome that he is "a man of undeclared war fought against the Axis."

British official circles hailed the speech as "further proof of the courage and realism" of the United States attitude toward the European conflict and as "one of the most powerful, logical indictments ever spoken" against aggression.

Virginio Gayda, the editor who often speaks for the Fascist regime, warned in delivering the Italian reply that the "tolerance" of the Rome-Berlin axis is limited.

"Nothing New," Says Gayda
Writing in the newspaper Il Giornale D'Italia, Gayda said, however, the President's speech in itself produced "nothing new," that it only confirmed the passage of the United States first from neutrality to non-belligerence and from that to a state "short of war."

The official German reaction was Adolf Hitler's own personal secret. Afternoon newspapers in Berlin carried a brief summary of the speech, omitting Mr. Roosevelt's prediction that the Axis would lose the war.

Unofficial Japanese sources in Tokyo said they considered the President's words as a commitment to further assistance to China.

Some French official sources in Vichy described the address as "sensational," others tended to minimize its significance with assertions that the President failed to present figures on United States defense production to prove that "America's bite would equal her bark."

BEAVER, HANOVER VOTING ON LEVIES

Determine Fate Of Schools; Center Township Issue Is Approved

Voters in the Beaver and Hanover rural school districts balloted today in special elections on two-mill school operating levies following the approval Saturday of a similar levy in the Center rural school district.

The Center township voters sanctioned the levy by a vote of 120 to 10.

The special election, one of six held or scheduled in the county, was designed to avert threatened closing of rural schools because of depleted funds.

West and Knox districts approved levies Dec. 21 after West area schools had been closed a month. Franklin school district will vote on an operating levy Jan. 7.

Only bare majorities are needed for the levies to pass. The Center township vote Saturday received a striking majority.

Taste In Water Produced By New Anti-oxide Chemical

Notice that "dark-brownish" taste in your water the last few days? More than a few people have, apparently, judging from the inquiries at the water works office in the city hall.

Today Service Director Charles Kennedy hastens to explain what it's all about and to ask that folks be patient for awhile in expectation of vastly improved conditions after it's all over.

The whole thing, in brief, is that the service director is experimenting with a new type chemical which is expected to remove the iron oxide from city water, definitely clear it up and eliminate those Monday "wash day browns."

The iron oxide is in the water at the source, Kennedy explains, and nothing can be done there.

These Frenchmen Choose To Fight Though Nation Falls

Dessert sands are stamping grounds for war these days. Top photo shows a company of French colonial soldiers in Syria who didn't approve of their country's capitulation to Germany. Today, banded in the Free French forces of General Charles de Gaulle, they fight on for France, taking part in the British drive on Libya under their own standard.

Below—More sand—and some donkeys. Fine sand which would stall the best of mechanized equipment doesn't worry these patient donkeys, used by the British in the desert. The Tommies who lead the animals wear much less than regulation uniform as they bring up supplies.

Electric Railway Veteran Dies In Alliance At 71

ALLIANCE, Dec. 30.—Rites were to have been held this afternoon for Thomas J. Oswalt, 71, Stark Electric railroad veteran who died Saturday. Burial was to take place in Mt. Union cemetery.

Mr. Oswalt helped to write the complete history of the Stark Electric, one of the last interurban systems in Ohio to yield to bus transportation.

Mr. Oswalt a life resident of this vicinity, helped to lay the first tracks of the company, rode the first car to make the trip over the line 37 years ago, and stood at the controls briefly when the last car was operated over the line in July, 1939.

YOUTH WOUNDED AS CHUM DROPS RIFLE

Howard Higgins, 15, is In Critical Condition In Alliance Hospital

Howard Higgins, 15, was shot and critically wounded at 4:45 p. m. Saturday as he and his brother, William, 11, and a companion, Jack Michael, 13, were inspecting traps on the Vern Galbreath farm near Westville lake.

Sheriff M. K. Duty reported that William Higgins stumbled and fell and that the .22 calibre rifle he was carrying dropped to the ground. The jar caused the weapon to go off and the bullet struck Howard who was reported walking about 12 feet ahead of his brother.

The victim was taken to a Sebring doctor's office and then to the Alliance City hospital by Lester Eagleton, a Westville gasoline station attendant.

The lad's condition at the hospital today was described as serious. The bullet had penetrated the abdomen.

The victim's brother told Sheriff Duty he didn't realize the gun had been cocked.

The Higgins brothers reside on the Galbreath farm. Michael lives nearby, the sheriff said.

PRESIDENT FLAYS AXIS, SEES DEFEAT

Emphasizes Also That U. S. Faces Situation Comparable To War

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—President Roosevelt told the people of the United States last night that they faced an emergency comparable only to war, and that thus far all efforts for defense and aid to Britain were "not enough."

The "business-as-usual" idea would have to be abandoned, he declared, if those efforts were to be successful.

Speaking with great seriousness in a much awaited radio broadcast that went round the world, the chief executive linked the nation's future security with Britain's anxiety to achieve victory.

The British people battling the Axis, he said, were fighting "an unholy alliance of power and pelf (which seeks) to dominate and enslave the human race."

U. S. Security At Stake
"Our own future security is greatly dependent on the outcome of that fight. Our ability to 'keep out of war' is going to be affected by that outcome."

"For us," he said, "this is an emergency as serious as war itself. We must apply ourselves to our task with the same resolution, the same sense of urgency, the same spirit of patriotism and sacrifice as we would show were we at war."

"All our present efforts are not enough," he asserted at another point. "We must have more ships, more guns, more planes—more of everything. This can only be accomplished if we discard the notion of 'business as usual.' This job cannot be done merely by superimposing on the existing productive facilities the added requirements for defense."

Mr. Roosevelt coupled his call for virtual wartime munitions production with the pledge of multiplying assistance for Britain and a stern arraignment of what he defined as the Axis philosophy of government.

"The Axis," he charged, "not merely admits but the Axis proclaims that there can be no ultimate peace between their philosophy of government and our philosophy of government."

Touches On Ten Points
The President's talk with the people—believed to have commanded the largest radio audience ever to hear any similar pronouncement of his—touched on ten major points. In effect, they were:

1—"Never before since Jamestown and Plymouth Rock has our American civilization been in such danger as now."

2—"Greatly accelerated munitions production was imperative, even at the sacrifice of luxury goods and non-essentials."

3—"A steady flow of increasing aid would continue to Britain as a vital part of the U. S. defense program, regardless of 'threats' from 'dictators.'"

4—"Our national policy is not Turn to PRESIDENT, Page 8

"50-50" PLAN TO BE DROPPED, BELIEF TODAY

Legislators Cite Pertinent Phases Of President's Speech

SENATOR WHEELER
TO DISCUSS TALK

American Stand Clarified, Says Majority Leader Barkley

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—President Roosevelt's declaration that United States experts would determine how best to use the nation's armament production "to defend this hemisphere" gave rise today to belief that an upward revision was contemplated in the present 50-50 formula governing aid to Britain.

"The decision as to how much shall be sent abroad and how much shall remain at home," Mr. Roosevelt said in his address last night, "must be made on the basis of our over-all military necessities."

Heretofore, a "rule of thumb" limited British aid to approximately 50 per cent of U. S. arms production, and the intimation that this policy might be abandoned for a higher percentage was one point commanding congressional attention as legislators studied and commented on the speech.

Control Of The Oceans
Those believing the 50-50 formula was due for discard cited another passage of the speech which they considered pertinent. In this, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"It is a matter of most vital concern to us that European and Asiatic war-makers should not gain control of the oceans which lead to this hemisphere. If Great Britain goes down, the Axis powers will control the continents of Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia, and the high seas—and they will be in a position to bring enormous military and naval resources against this hemisphere."

Senator Austin (R-Vt.), the acting minority leader, said his impression was that the President "kept his hands untied" on the amount of defense production to be sent to Great Britain and had left the administration "free to take any position which our military necessities make obvious."

Wheeler "Surprised"
Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.), who will discuss the chief executive's address in a radio speech tonight (10:30 p. m. EST, NBC.) declared he was "surprised that the President intimated that everyone who disagrees with him might be a fifth columnist, or might be doing the bidding of the dictators; it seems to be that beneath the dignity of the President."

Austin, frequently a supporter of administration foreign policies, said the President had made clear it was "necessary for our own safety" to give Britain all possible assistance "short of sending troops."

"Clarifies Objectives"
Senator Barkley (D-Ky.), the majority leader, told reporters that the talk "was magnificent" and "clarifies more than anything else the objectives of the American people."

Senator Ball (R-Minn.) called the speech "a very convincing, strong and logical argument for aid to England" but added he was disappointed that Mr. Roosevelt "did not give the public more facts on our present production and what it should be."

"I'm in favor of extending all possible aid to Great Britain," said Senator Connally (D-Tex.). "We don't need to wait until the fire burns our feet."

Senator McCarran (D-Nev.), opponent of some administration foreign policies, remarked that he had hoped Mr. Roosevelt would "be more explicit" regarding the progress of national defense "and as to what we were doing to keep out of foreign wars."

BRITAIN IS INCIDENTAL

America's failure so far to make up its mind what the war's really about, besides making the world safe for Shakespeare and the much admired English accent, is reflected in acute jitters over what editorial writers glibly call the "Nazi peace offensive."

The jitters, through rattling teeth, are warning that peace talk may be Hitler's slippery way of trying to make the United States ease up on production for defense. In short, if the acute plight of Great Britain were to be made to seem less acute than it is, by possibility of peace, then the United States would begin to spare the horses.

This falls just a red hair short of being an insult to the intelligence and patriotism of all Americans above the age of one year. Tragically, however, it embraces a line of reasoning that is becoming well worn the line that the United States is spending money and conscripting manpower to save Great Britain and that if the British quit fighting or get licked the United States will have no further reason to rush through a program of turning out a lot more of everything used in making war.

The United States is preparing to become the dominant national power on the face of the earth, regardless of whether the war is a victory for the British, the Germans, or a standoff. Peace between the present belligerents wouldn't change a thing; it would be no better than the peace that gave Europe a breathing spell from 1918 to 1940, in preparation for fighting the current war. Before any belligerent government starts any war in the future, it is going to have to figure the angles on the United States, which will be strong enough on sea, land and in the air to play world policeman with something more awe-inspiring than a big mouth.

This nation's proper destiny is clear. It can become strong enough to enforce its ideals of conduct wherever they are challenged. It isn't working to save Great Britain. It is working to achieve its own destiny; winning the Battle of Britain is a byproduct.

NO. 15

As an instrumentality of communication, radio's warmest admirers are not persons with merchandise to sell, but those with ideas to sell. The merchandisers merely pay the overhead.

Were it not for radio, fireside chats, which are America's distinctive contribution to the technique of governing by pressure from the masses, would be responsible. At the end of President Roosevelt's second term, he has made his fireside chats an internationally famous institution. His friendly, persuasive voice and mellow inflections are fully as well known as the raspy bellows of the famous totalitarian twins.

In his first two terms, up to the chat scheduled of Sunday night, the President delivered 14 versions of this interesting kind of public address, eight of them on Sunday night, which thus becomes the day set aside for making political contact between the president and the executive. The last three chats, with yesterday's included, have been concerned with the war. Night chats were delivered during Mr. Roosevelt's first term, and four of the eight were given during the first eight months of the first year. While the general style of the chats has been that of a national leader taking the people into his confidence, one of the chats was delivered in the manner of an angry political leader announcing a purge of his party (chat of June 24, 1938).

It is undeniably true that a fireside chat takes precedence over everything else on the air on any given occasion, probably because the technique of creating an united opinion in this manner has been used sparingly. The phrase "fireside chat," incidentally, is disclaimed by the White House. Apparently it was invented by commentators of the press, who share the experience of being taken into Mr. Roosevelt's confidence while seated at their own firesides with everybody who used to wonder what it would be like to be a newspaperman and occasionally have a chance to talk to a genuine notable.

PECULIARITY ITEM

Hopeless as it is to try to make sense out of disjointed information about a war that never did make sense, it's impossible not to wonder about Ireland.

In a broadcast aimed at the United States, Prime Minister De Valera spake glumly about Ireland's troubled neutrality and seems to say it is going to be preserved at all costs, meaning the Free States Irish aren't going to give any aid or comfort to the British. The same day Berlin tells the United States it will invite a lot of trouble if it tries to send boats to Irish ports after amending the neutrality act. The only reason for sending boats to Ireland would be to aid the British.

But a few weeks ago, Prime Minister Churchill was wishing the British had access to Irish ports, so vessels could put in at them, instead of having to sail all the way around Ireland. Somebody's wrong; it's probably the Irish. Perhaps those ports are going to be taken into protective custody by the British before the Irish wake up some morning to find themselves helling Hitler.

ONE FELLA SEZ T'OTHER FELLA

Not the funniest but easily one of the sharpest radio gags of the year has been pulled by Trust Buster Thurman Arnold and his straight man, Attorney General Jackson. For those who tuned in too late to catch the program, Jackson says to Arnold, "Arnold, what's the difference between American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers controlling the music played over the radio and the radio companies controlling it?" And this fellow Arnold says right back, "Jackson, I don't see any difference. I'm sick of one and half dozing on the other."

So what does this Arnold do but say that he will begin criminal proceedings against both of them the first of the year unless they call off the fight between them to see which one is going to get the inside track on what the justice department says neither of them has any right to be going? Yes sir it was one of the funniest things anybody ever heard about the air.

For Tuesday, December 31

The astral forces for this day should unite to make very pleasant and harmonious conditions, although there may be need for certain postponements or change of plans at the eleventh hour of social, domestic or romantic festivities. There may be some frustrating situations or intrigues demanding prudence, discretion and sound judgment lest there be regrettable entanglements or snares. This vigilance relates particularly to correspondence or written agreements.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may look for a fairly progressive and successful year, with some moderate advancement or signs of preferment from those in influential positions. While there may be definite and tenacious obstacles to combat, the auguries are favorable for success in this, especially if wariness, foresight and the ability to escape sinister schemes, betrayal and deceit is shown. The social, domestic and sentimental activities may complexion the year's adventures.

A child born on this day should be kindly, compassionate and possess many social graces, as well as much talent in artistic expression. It will have much humor, although being serious and of sound judgment.

It's heartening to hear from William Allen White that his committee to Defend America isn't for war, after all. It saves a lot of effort trying to picture the gentle sage of Emporia as a knight in armour.

Ridiculing Churchill's speech urging the overthrow of Mussolini, an authorized Berlin source asserts: "The Italian people undoubtedly remember what the Duce made of their nation." Sure. That's the duce of it.

Haile Selassie may not get back his old throne, but it will give him comforting feeling of revenge if he can get on the 50-yard line and see Mussolini's men running

METHODS FOR INCREASING WEIGHT

Various Theories Discussed By Dr. Clendening

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Variations in the height of human beings is a good deal of a mystery. In spite of much research and the accumulation of some indubitably scientific facts. To most, it is a philosophic speculation, but for the too short person it is a very immediate and practical trouble.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

He wants to be taller and he wants it right now. For these people a book has recently been published, Short Stature and Height Increase by C. J. Gerling (Harvest House, Publishers). It tells about all there is to tell on the subject.

The factor that seems to be most operative in height determination is heredity. It is true that the mechanism of heredity being what it is, it doesn't always seem to work, and little parents may have comparative giants for sons and daughters. There is a tendency for this characteristic to skip a generation or so. But Dr. Franz Boas, the well known American anthropologist, states that heredity is not a prime factor in a person's stature, and that such things as behavior, diet and living conditions play much more important parts.

Climate Theory

This book does not mention the theory of Dr. Carence Mills of Cincinnati that weather affects growth. For years, until recently, the temperate climate of the globe has been getting colder and for eighty years college freshmen have been getting taller. Lately, a warm spell has set in and Dr. Mills reported that records of height and weight for university freshmen were tending downward. Dr. Mills thinks that if body heat is rapidly disposed of, as in a cold climate, it stimulates the body cells to grow faster.

The body does not grow in arithmetical progression as age advances, but in spurts, nor do all the parts of the body grow at the same rate. "The growth of the body," wrote C. B. Davenport, "is the resultant of several growth-promoting internal stimuli. They act at different times and upon different organs. In different races, the relative activity of these stimuli is diverse so that some races are long-legged and others short-legged, etc."

The effects of the ductless glands, foods and exercises are discussed in different chapters by Mr. Gerling. Dr. J. C. Meakins, of McGill university, is quoted as saying:

Diet Important

"Given a normal pituitary and thyroid function, with a proper

Accomplishments Of Farm Program Shown

WASHINGTON—The agriculture department reported today farms comprising more than 355,000,000 acres, 78 per cent of the country's crop land, were protected and improved by conservation measures of the farm program in 1939.

It said nearly 5,800,000 farmers participated in the conservation program. Among accomplishments listed were:

New seedlings of legumes and grasses on 41,000,000 acres. Seeding to green manure and cover crops on 26,000,000 acres. Protection of 26,000,000 acres by such erosion control measures as contour farming, strip cropping, and summer fallow.

Application of nearly 5,800,000 tons of lime and 640,000 tons of superphosphate. Construction of 354,000,000 feet of terraces.

The department said these practices were supplemented by participation of more than 48,000 farmers and ranchers in the 1939 range conservation program.

Principal range practices, the department pointed out, included improving the stand of grass on nearly 22,500,000 acres of range land, the building of nearly 21,000 tanks and reservoirs for stock water, and the construction of more than 8,000,000 feet of spreader terraces.

Memphis Finds Arrests Influenced by Weather

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Policemen have a special reason to read the weather forecast. Sergt. Don Owens, chief of the homicide squad, said that when the weather is warm and pleasant the number of arrests on such charges as assault and battery, drunkenness, and prowling increases.

On the other hand, when there is a cold wave or rainy, the number of arrests declines sharply.

Bridgeport Lady Says Ton Jon No. 3 Brings Economical and Pleasant Relief

Local Lady Suffered Untold Agony From Rheumatic Pains In Her Legs, Arms, Hands and Neck, Felt Like Screaming From Such Torture Pains. Stomach Disorders Were Many and Distressing. TON JON No. 3 Proved To Be A Blessing and She Is Glad To Recommend This Remarkable Health Restorer.

MRS. HARRY BRISTLE

There are people everywhere in Bellaire and nearby towns who are happy and well who once were sick and ailing, and getting little or no enjoyment out of life. By various means the good news of TON JON came within the reach of many. Thousands are delighted each day with the amazing results they receive from TON JON and are more than willing to tell the secret of their renewed health to others. Mrs. Harry Bristle, Presbyterian church member and a life-long resident of Bridgeport, Ohio, near Bellaire, is anxious to tell of her happy experience with TON JON. She states:

For the last few years I would suffer something dreadful from rheumatic pains upon retiring at night. Through the day the pains in my legs, hands, arms and neck were so excruciating I would almost scream aloud with agony. My legs, hands, feet and ankles would swell terribly and I certainly endured much grief from stiff, sore, aching joints and muscles. I would be called to leave my bed each night three times or more to relieve my kidneys with a torturing burning and smarting sensation accompanying urination. Bad breath, bad taste in my mouth and spots before my eyes were constantly pestering me.

"Gas would form in my stomach and the pressure around my heart was awful. Nausea, sourness, shortness of breath, and acid risings troubled me. I was in a wornout, rundown condition and due to the fact that I was so nervous, I suffered from many throbbing headaches, Neuralgia, constipation and poor sleep were also what I had to contend with.

"I heeded to a TON JON advertisement and started taking TON JON No. 3. Instantly it brought much welcomed relief. TON JON No. 3 has given me the most economical and pleasant relief of any medicine I've ever tried. I can now rest at night and feel like going places and enjoying life. Although I have taken TON JON No. 3 for a very short time I feel assured that it will bring me permanent relief. I think enough of this famous medicine to recommend it to anyone else who is suffering from these troubles. I sincerely believe they can get relief as I have."

Thousands endorse the three New and Different Medicines known as TON JON 1, 2, 3. Talk to the TON JON Health Representative at Broadway Lease Drug Store, Salem, Ohio.

"TRIAL WITHOUT JURY"

By JAMES RONALD

CHAPTER NINETEEN
Sheriff Black lit a cigar. He paced the room for a few moments with a gloomy frown before announcing: "There's nothing more I can do here tonight, Burrows. I'm tired. I'm going home. Have that moved to the undertaker's—he indicated the stark figure of Octavia Osborne—"and arrange for an autopsy. We'd better hold the inquest Monday and get it over. You'll have to see that summonses are issued to everyone in the house—oh, and you'd better summons this Ted Fleming as well. Drop in at my house in the morning and we'll talk the case over. Night."

"Good night," when Inspector Burrows was leaving the house, the uniformed officer at the gate accented him.

"There was a woman here a few minutes ago, Inspector, who wanted to speak to you," he said, talking quietly so that the reporters—still waiting impatiently—could not hear. "Said it was about this business."

"There why the devil didn't you send her in?"

"She wouldn't go in, Inspector. Said for you to call on her when you finished here. She lives in one of that row of brick houses down the road a bit. 'Bide a Wee,' she said the name was. You're to ask for Miss Somethin-or-other Whipple."

The reporters were clamoring for the police inspector's attention. He silenced them temporarily with a wave of his arm.

"If you'll wait a little longer," he said, "I'll tell you all you want to know."

Burrows plodded along the dark road to the rose-brick houses. He came to the gate on which was painted Bide a Wee. There was no need to ask for Miss Whipple, for that lady opened to door to him in person.

"You wanted to see me, ma'am?" Miss Whipple's eyes gleamed behind her rimless glasses.

"Won't you come in?"

She led the way to a prim parlor crowded with bric-a-brac. Seating himself gingerly on a gold-and-plush chair, Inspector Burrows felt himself being shouldered and jostled by an overwhelming display of china dogs.

"This afternoon, Mr. Burrows," began the spinster eagerly, her eyes lighting up. "I happened to be sitting at the window and I saw everything that went on over at the Osbornes. About three I noticed—"

"Wait a minute," said Inspector Burrows thoughtfully. "You are quite a distance from the Osbornes. I don't understand how you could see anything very distinctly."

"I have a telescope," retorted Miss Whipple tartly.

In the still of the night, Edith Osborne lay awake listening to the fitful breathing of her husband, every breath a longdrawn sigh. He was awake, too; she could feel the tension of the situation just as he did. There was nothing she could do about it; nothing she could say....

Octavia had not died—she had been killed. And murder in a haunting sense makes its victims live. Octavia would never die. The swift tightening about her throat of the scarf which had ended her life had granted her a terrifying immortality.

No, words were worse than useless. Edith could not say to her husband: My dear, I know your sister was murdered in your house; I know the police think one of us did it; and, of course, I see that there is nothing else for them to think. I agree that it is going to rest on your whole life and wreck it; but let's not think about it, let's stop worrying and go to sleep.

In the hush of the night, she heard him. It's timbers stretched themselves, groaning and creaking; faint whispers rustled through dark passages and empty rooms; and behind the wainscot ran an odd surling sound. The clock on the dining-room mantelpiece whirled and clicked before striking a deep, sonorous chime that hung upon the still night air, swelling like circles that widen on the surface of a pool when a stone is thrown into it.

Suddenly a cry echoed through the house. Edith thought she had imagined it until she heard it again. Stephen sat up.

"That's Peter," he whispered harshly. "Sounds like a nightmare."

He slid his feet out of bed and fumbled for his slippers. Edith let him go. Comforting his son might do him good. Stephen padded along the gloomy hall and into the room where the boys slept. He could dimly see the limp form of Michael, sunk in slumber; and the small white form of Peter, sitting up in the other bed, quaking with terror.

Stephen put his arms round the boy and held him tightly, feeling with pity the spasmodic shudder that ran through the slim body.

"It's all right, son, nothing's going to hurt you. Daddy's here."

Gradually, Peter allowed himself to be soothed. The tears stopped coursing down his wet cheeks and the shuddering ceased except for an occasional tremor.

"Ch, Dad," he whispered brokenly. "It was awful. I thought Aunt Octavia was in the room."

"Hush, boy, hush! You'll wake the others. It was only a dream, Peter, only a dream."

"Bob D—Dowell told me once that when people die th—that way their ghosts haunt the places where they were killed forever."

"Bob was talking nonsense, son. There's no such things as ghosts."

The boy was silent for a moment. An icy grip tightened on Stephen's heart. What could he say to dispel the shadow of Octavia's death from Peter's mind? He could find no words that would do it.

Kicking off his slippers, Stephen pushed back the bed-clothes and slipped in beside the boy. Peter put two slender arms about his neck and nestled close to him.

"You won't leave me, Dad? You'll stay all night?"

"Yes, son, I'll stay."

"I'm glad."

"Good night, Peter."

"Goodnight, Dad."

At five in the morning Stephen gently extricated himself from his sleeping child's clinging arms and tiptoed downstairs. He opened the back-door and went out to the garden. He had forgotten his slippers and the dew was cool and refreshing on his bare feet. It was a lovely morning, the sky was clear and blue, the air sweet and fresh. A bird chirped in the branches of a tree above his head and far away a rooster crowed a shrill challenge to the sun.

Yesterday dawned like this, he thought; and yesterday was the most dreadful day of my life. What will today bring?

His roses were coming on. Every day more blooms opened out to their full splendor. An hour later, when Edith came down she found her husband staring at a rose as though it were a crystal ball. He was still in pajamas and bare feet. Terrified, she made him go and dress.

Hannah was up and a fragrant odor of coffee began to pervade the house. The normal Sunday morning breakfast hour was half past nine, but Edith and her husband breakfasted alone at seven. Edith had decided to let the children sleep until they wakened of their own accord.

At eight a boy came clattering up the gravel path and deposited the Sunday papers on the doorstep. Stephen was looking out of the window and the boy gave him a curious stare. He had seen Stephen at least a hundred times in the past year but he gaped at him as though he were an oddity viewed for the first time.

Stephen went out to bring in the papers. He stooped to pick them up and the glaring headline, which was spread across the top of the front page of the uppermost paper, struck him like a physical blow:

WOMAN MURDERED WHILE NIECE READS SHAKESPEARE

With shaking hands he lifted the paper. He leaned back against the parlor, weak with horror, and read the sub-heads and the columns of type beneath them:

LAKELEW— Tragedy entered a quiet home here, Saturday afternoon, when Octavia Osborne, 71, wealthy spinster of Sutton Square, New York City, was strangled with a silk scarf while sitting in the living-room of her brother. 50-year-old Stephen Osborne. Ann Osborne, a niece of the murdered woman is alleged to have been reading a book—Shakespeare's Henry the V—in the room at the time of the crime. She told the police that she heard nothing until her aunt's companion entered the room and gave the alarm.

A local resident, whose name the police are withholding for the present, has come forward to say that, although she was watching the house all afternoon from the window at which she was sitting, she saw no one enter except members of the family and Mr. Edward Fleming, son of a prominent Broadway lawyer, who is locally reputed to be engaged to the eldest daughter.

A scarf, found knotted tightly about the neck of the murdered woman, belonged to Dorothy Osborne, one of her nieces. (Stephen skipped rapidly through the text): visit was cut short by a serious family quarrel which arose when Miss Osborne announced the terms of a will she intended to make, disinherit her brother....

draft of new will was found partially burned in a fireplace.... Osborne had lost his job the previous day.... police questioned various members of the family and took a set of fingerprints from each....scouting the possibility that a tramp might have committed the crime....

With haggard eyes Stephen read to the bottom of the page, then followed the injunction: "Turn to page 16." Descriptions of the individual Osbornes, further details of the crime and veiled hints that no outsider could be responsible for it....

There was a picture of the house, taken from the fields behind, in which the French windows were marked with an X; a snapshot of Sheriff Black entering the gate, with a police car in the background, and an awe-struck crowd in the roadway over which ran the caption: "Crowds Flocking to Scene of Mysterious Crime."

Modern U.S. Army Takes Its Training To School Classroom

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — The young man who joins the Army these days stands little chance of remaining a simple, rifle-carrying infantryman if he knows radio, the workings of a gasoline or diesel engine, or even if he can operate a typewriter with reasonable skill.

Most any skill is being welcomed at centers where raw recruits are taken into the military machine and selected for the various branches of service. Every effort is made to avoid the wasteful World War practices in which a good mechanic was turned into a cook, or a typist into a blacksmith.

Every man taken into the service is carefully interviewed and all his past activities, including his hobbies, studied. His record is placed in a card index file for ready reference. He will, as far as possible, be put into the work for which he is most adapted or in which he is most interested.

Soldiering, in the machine age at times resembles school days more than it does man-size occupations. Every school facility is being used to the utmost and new schools are being created.

Tank School at Fort Knox

At Fort Knox, Ky., headquarters of the armored force, a whole row of school buildings is being set up. In some classes, student soldiers—many of them new to the ranks—see a tank motor taken apart and assembled. It is not a simple matter of fixing parts, but of learning what makes the intricate machine go, and why.

In another class motorcycles are repaired and rebuilt. At another, young soldiers hammer away at typewriters, learning to become company clerks.

One section devotes itself to the intricacies of radio of the various types used in the armored force. Another works over the task of learning to send and receive messages in code.

While the army may lack the machines which these men are to operate, it is wasting no time in training soldiers to use them once they are available. Classes are expanding rapidly and ultimately will instruct as many as 800 men at a time. The lessons will be expounded by instructors at one time through a loudspeaker system.

More Instructors Needed

With their education completed, the most adept will be sent to their organizations to act as instructors. The others will return to their units to apply their training.

Training of aviation mechanics is proceeding at the same rapid pace at Chanute field, Ill., a long established school.

Education is not confined to enlisted men. Even the generals are going to infantry, field artillery, cavalry and other schools for "refresher" courses. Reserve officers on active duty are pursuing the same course to fit them for the commands which they must sometime occupy.

Calumet Club Dance Climaxes Series Of Christmas Events

Saturday night's annual Calumet Club dance brought a fitting climax to a series of annual dances held last week.

Thursday evening a group of 11 girls, Misses Gloria Gibson, Lucia Sharp, Nancy and Betsy Reese, Nanabelle Beardmore, Marjorie Brian, Martha Clark, Vivian Feltz, Jan Wallace, Jean Carey and Lois Hoover, held the second party of its kind at the Masonic temple with Freddy Boles and his orchestra furnishing the music.

The hall was decorated with four Christmas trees lighted up with colored spotlights, and balloons were served during the evening to approximately 175 people. Out-of-town guests were from Alliance, Cleveland, Toledo, Sharon, Lisbon and Youngstown.

The last in a series of three dances given by the Masons and the Eastern Stars was an event of Friday evening at the Masonic temple. Music was furnished by "Paul Cook and his musical Cooks" and the hall was appropriately decorated with a Christmas tree and seasonal decorations. It was attended by approximately 100 couples.

The Calumet dance was at the Elks club Saturday evening, with music being furnished by Eddie Jungmann and his orchestra from Canton. Approximately 100 couples attended, with out-of-town guests being from Detroit, Mich., and East Palestine. Proceeds of this dance go to the Red Cross.

The hall was decorated with Christmas wreaths and trees throughout.

Pre-Spring Bonnets

BY PRUNELLA WOOD

LIKE print design fabrics for Spring frocks, early-worm buys in millinery are often fine trophies. One can with conscience "pick up" a new straw hat for that brief vacation to the mid-Winter South and put it by for the coming Easter parade at home, if the model is really good. When the rush is on, just as the bluebird whistles, shops appear to have tons of mediocre hats and very little else for the harried shopper.

Here are two straw hats ready for the cruise season, either of which can claim kinship in advance with Spring's perennial navy blue suit. The smaller model, right, is navy chaurvrie soie, a straw rather like loosely woven baku, faced with white pique and stuck with a hat-pin of red... the patriotic colors once again.

The larger hat, below, is of the same navy straw and it is trimmed with matching velvet which bands the crown and is shirred with dressmaker effect around the brim edge. These are not expensive hats. (There's one of the arguments for American fashions one seldom hears... the excellence of "off-the-pile" models.)

Various name designers of millinery are offering for immediate wear half-hats, so called, which are really a cage of ribbon or velvet decorated with a bit of lace, some flowers or a scarf. The notion behind these pretties is to woo the hatless-vogue girls back to millinery normalcy. If you'd seen this tribe as I did, this ayem, trotting hatless to work with snow drifts cresting their pompadours!

Dodge Showing Convertible Coupe To Public And Dealers

To its 1941 custom models of Dodge Liners Dodge is adding a convertible coupe on which production has begun. The new model is of unusual design, in a number of respects and has, in addition to the conventional windows disappearing into the doors, two rear windows disappearing into the sides of the body. The provision of the two extra windows gives the convertible coupe the wide range of vision ordinarily found in sedan and brougham body types, according to the Althouse Motor Co., Salem dealer.

With all windows raised and the safety glass ventilator wings closed the occupants are glass-enclosed in front and at the sides, protected from wind and dust yet enjoying the unobstructed view and the open air freedom that make this type of car the preference of many motorists.

Many Features

The collapsible top is operated by electric motors, rising into its protecting position or folding back and lowering into place as the driver manipulates a control button on the instrument panel.

Easy access to the rear seats of the new Dodge convertible coupe is through wide doors, past tilting front seat backs.

While the major chassis details of the coupe—such as 119 1-2 inch wheelbase and power plant features—are in the main those of the 1941 line of Dodge Luxury Liners, the body structure is marked by a luxurious leather-upholstered interior. An unusually spacious under-deck compartment with spring balanced lid affords ample luggage accommodations.

Has Complete Garage

Repair work and services on Dodge and Chrysler-built cars are featured at the Althouse Motor Co. A complete parts and auto accessory department is maintained by the concern.

Skilled mechanics are capable of handling work on any make of car and the garage's body repair and painting departments are widely known in the Salem area. An emergency service and towing truck is available at all times of day or night. Telephone for a call of the truck along the highway, to a home or place of business or other location.

Emphasizes Proportions Of Pontiac

You can't stretch a folding rule—this enterprising Pontiac salesman uses a 6-foot carpenter's rule to illustrate the generous proportions of his 1941 cars. He is shown demonstrating to a prospect that the new "Unsteered" Turret Top Body by Fisher of this Pontiac Streamliner Torpedo Sedan measures a full 72 inches from side to side.

BIG GAINS SHOWN IN HEATING TRADE

Perfection Of Automatic Heating Cuts Down Labor

The advancement made in the heating industry during recent years is one of the remarkable accomplishments of the age, says J. R. Stratton, local plumber and steam fitter.

The perfection of automatic heating has cut down the amount of labor required in the heating of new and old buildings to a irreducible minimum.

Many of the newer types of equipment are so constructed that they may be installed in existing dwellings. All of them require less fuel.

Much to Choose From

In selecting a heating plant for today's home, the buyer is confronted with an ever-widening choice. In the first place, it is possible to have automatic heating with any one of the three principal fuels—coal, gas, or oil.

Which fuel will be decided upon depends on a number of factors such as the type of construction, whether the building will lend itself readily to one type or another; the amount and quality of the insulation (now universally recognized as essential with any type of heating system); and the prevailing as well as likely future rates for the different fuels in a given area.

In the second place, the buyer may choose between different types of heating systems suitable for use with each of the principal fuels. Among these are gravity hot water, forced circulation hot water, steam, vacuum, and warm air.

There was a time not so long ago when some of the more advanced types of automatic heating systems were too expensive for the small home. In recent years, however, much of the energy and resourcefulness of manufacturers of heating equipment has been concentrated on the problem of providing the best possible automatic heating for houses in the $5,000 class.

Modernizing the Old House People used to believe that as long as they lived in an old house the benefits of automatic heating were denied to them. Here again the industry has accomplished as much for the existing dwelling as it has for the new house with the result that the conversion and replacement fields provide perhaps an even greater market than new construction.

The oil burner, the pioneer device in automatic heating, lends itself to installation in an existing home as well as new construction. One of the newest developments is the boiler-burner unit which houses everything, including coils for the heating of the domestic hot water the year around, under one neat steel jacket.

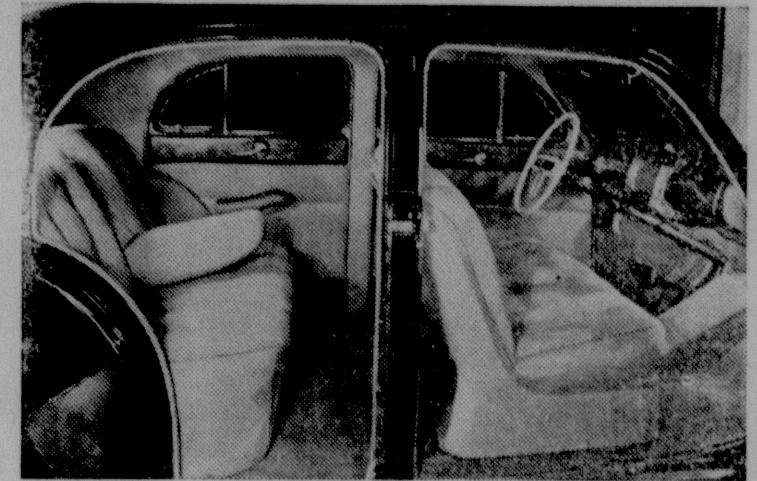

With domestic gas as the fuel, the buyer can convert an existing boiler with special conversion burners or a new gas-fired boiler may be installed with the burners an integral part of the boiler.

Similarly, the homeowner who prefers to use coal may have automatic heating by connecting a stoker to a boiler or furnace or a special stoker-boiler or stoker-furnace unit may be installed. Completely automatic heating is provided with the bin-fed stoker. New attachments provide for the removal of the ashes into sealed containers.

Purchased now on the monthly payment plan of the F.H.A., an automatic hot water or steam heating plant will be ready to deliver a steady flow of effortless heat before real winter weather is with us.

POPULAR BALLOT GAINING SUPPORT

Sen. Lodge Leading Move For Constitutional Amendment

WASHINGTON — The Electoral College may perform its last function when it casts its third-term ballots on Dec. 16.

Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge, R., Mass., and other members of Congress have announced they will submit resolutions for a constitutional amendment to abolish the college as an "outmoded" relic of government.

They prefer, instead, to rest the election decisions upon the popular vote. The Electoral College system, its opponents argue is cumbersome and useless.

It was set up by the Constitution before the formation of political parties, on the theory that the voters would choose as Presidential electors the best and wisest men in their states. These electors would then, wisely, choose the best man for President, and the second best for Vice President.

Electors Early Pledged

When Thomas Jefferson established his Republican party—now the Democratic party—it became the custom for the electors to pledge themselves in advance of the election to vote for a certain candidate, and this defeated the theory of the electoral college.

Each state has the number of votes in the electoral college that it has members of the house and senate. These electors will meet in their state capitols on Dec. 16—the first Monday after the second Wednesday in December—and vote as they were pledged.

They will send one copy of their vote to the president of the senate, two copies to their state secretary of state, two copies to Secretary of State Cordell Hull, and deposit the remaining copy with the federal judge of the district in which they met.

Then, on Jan. 6, both houses of congress will meet in a joint session in the House of Representatives chamber with the president of the senate—Vice President John N. Garner—or in his absence, the president pro tempore, presiding. The presiding officer will open each state ballot and announce the results. Official tabulators will carefully inspect the ballots and note the result.

Winner To Be Declared

After compiling the result, they will hand the official total to the president of the senate, and he will then declare President Franklin D. Roosevelt reelected for a third term.

Opponents of the electoral college system also have pointed out that as it operates a minority candidate may win the bulk of the electoral college vote. Political statisticians have figured that the Republicans, because of the way their following is spread, can win with 49 or 48 per cent of the popular vote. Presidents Rutherford B. Hayes, and Benjamin Harrison won with minority votes.

Statisticians estimated that a switch of 1 per cent of the popular vote would have given Wendell L. Willkie victory, yet President Roosevelt won a landslide in the electoral college.

"Resolved - To Look My Best - Always"

It's coming time for a few resolutions.

With a new year rapidly nearing, you can consider, when thinking over those resolutions, the problem of your own personal appearance—which need be no problem at all.

However, it is something to think about seriously because during the coming year personal appearance will mean a lot to you, just as tidiness and personal appearance have meant much every year.

When so little effort on your part will achieve the things you have in mind, there is little excuse for failure to achieve your objectives.

The Paris Cleaners will work hand in hand with you in this program and the only energy on your part will be that needed to lift the telephone.

The Paris will provide prompt service and their prices, as always, are reasonable for quality work.

Artist's Symbol of China

This portrait study of a Chinese baby by James Montgomery Flagg, noted artist and illustrator, will be featured in a poster symbolizing the current appeal of the China Emergency Relief Committee. Flagg presented it in New York to Mrs. Herbert H. Lehman, wife of the governor of New York and member of the committee's national board. The committee, headed by Pearl S. Buck, was organized recently to raise $1,000,000 for medical supplies urgently needed in China. It is affiliated with the American Bureau for Medical Aid to China.

CHRYSLER LEADER EXPECTS BIG YEAR

Sales Chief Takes Optimistic View Of Coming Period

Charles L. Jacobson, vice president in charge of sales, Chrysler Sales division, Chrysler corporation, is looking forward to another big year for the automotive industry.

"There appears to be abundant reason for optimism regarding conditions in the automobile business," says Jacobson. "It now seems to be just a question of getting enough production to take care of our orders."

The calendar year 1940 was the largest in the history of the Chrysler Sales Division in the manufacture of six-and-eight cylinder cars. Our factory shipments in the month of December will be the largest that we have made since August, 1929, the peak of the "boom" year. Every month of our 1941 model production has set an all-time high for that month of the year.

Outlook Encouraging "The immediate outlook for 1941 is the most encouraging. Our orders for January shipment insure that it will be the largest January in our history."

"The current brisk demand for Chrysler cars may be attributed in large part to the splendid public reception of fluid drive since we made it available in all our models. This feature seems to have hit a responsive chord. The present-day demand of motorists seems to be for things that increase the convenience and comfort of motor cars and that reduce the amount of work required to drive them."

Fluid drive, by eliminating the necessity for using the clutch and gearshift lever in about 98 per cent of driving, certainly does that. It also has a definite safety value, in that it gives the driver more chance to concentrate on his steering and braking operations. Women in particular seem to drive with much more confidence when they do not have to worry about gearshifting."

Pontiac Helping In Safety Drive

If automobile accident figures begin to show a decline in a hundred or more communities in the United States in the next few years, traffic experts will know that part of the favorable trend is due to the driver training courses sponsored by the American Automobile association in cooperation with the Pontiac Motor division of General Motors in the high schools and colleges of the country.

Pontiac has just assigned 50 of its 1941 models to this educational work bringing the total number of driver training Pontiacs that have been assigned to the A.A.A. during the last five years up to 157. Each car is equipped with two sets of brake and clutch pedals for use by driver training students in the final part of their semester's course.

So popular are the AAA driver training courses that all of the students desiring to take the course frequently cannot be accommodated. The high school course involves 25 hours of class work and eight hours of actual driving time for each student. The pure white driver training cars with their AAA emblem and "Courtesy of Pontiac Motor Division" on the doors are familiar sights in cities where driver training courses are presented.

Sports Heads Turn Attention To National Defense Program

Also Hear Indictment Of "Evils Of Over-Emphasis" At Coaches' Convention

Lafayette's Prexy Asks For Expansion Of Athletic Programs To Help Fit Nation's Youth For National Defense

NEW YORK, Dec. 30 — Having talked themselves hoarse about the offense in football, the nation's collegiate athletic heads turned today toward the national defense program as applied to college sports, and heard an indictment of the "evils of over-emphasis" in the gridiron world.

While still discussing the nine rules changes recommended by the coaches rules committee to help gridiron attack, delegates to the conventions of the coaches and the National Collegiate Athletic Association heard a new explosion when Dr. William Mather Lewis, president of Lafayette college, teed up on the current collegiate gridiron set-up.

Head of a school which has just concluded an undefeated football season, he was the chief speaker of a joint meeting of the coaches and the N. C. A. A. He pleaded for expansion of inter-collegiate and intramural athletics to help fit the nation's youth for defense.

Play In Own Class
Dr. Lewis, urging colleges to "be content to play in your own class," said:

"Every football contract should contain a clause stating that both teams shall have the same number of men on the bench. I don't object to seeing a team in which I am interested lose occasionally, but to see it beaten by four different teams on the same afternoon is a little much."

Speaking as Pennsylvania administrator of the Selective Service Act, Dr. Lewis explained officials were concerned about the number of young men who are being given deferred classification because of physical imperfection. The N. C. A. A. and coaches, he said, are a tremendous factor in "righting this situation."

Chief among the coaches' rules changes recommendations was one to eliminate the touchback on a fourth-down pass over the goal line and have the ball turned over to the defending team at the point at which the fourth down scrimmage began. Other suggestions, to be recommended to the N. C. A. A. rules committee meeting at Pine Valley, N. J., Wednesday, included widening the goal posts six feet to 24 feet, 6 inches to encourage field goal kicking, and permission for a player to re-enter a ball game once during each quarter.

Breezy Briefs Of Sport From Brietz To You

By EDDIE BRIETZ
NEW YORK, Dec. 30—Believe it or not: Johnny Ray, manager of Billy Conn, is here trying to bet $500 against $20,000 on Billy vs. Joe Louis—but no takers. . . . It won't be long now until the Big Ten rescinds that rule forbidding its basketball teams to perform in private promoters—Madison Square Garden, for instance—The west coast is pretty bitter because rest of the country's papers rate Sugar and Cotton bowl games over the Rose bowl. What do they hope? Anybody want to argue the Sugar bowl hasn't got t-h-e game next Wednesday? . . . Here is news—the ultra-conservative Ed Barrow virtually concedes next year's pennant to the Yankees.

Looking Back on 1940
Best back Gypsy Rose Lee. Leading base stealer—Hitler. Best game of year—stud poker. Longest hit—"Tobacco Road".

Coaches' Huddle
Plenty of shopping around at the coaches' meeting—everybody after the Dartmouth plum, including Francis Schmidt. But Tuss McLaughry of Brown seems to have the inside. (Dartmouth has 100 applications). . . . Ohio State is tantalizing Bunny Oakes, Colorado U-x and a half down more by keeping them on the anxious bench. . . . Warren King, ex-Dartmouth star, taking bows for turning in an unbeaten, untied season at Garden City, L. I. high, in his first year as a coach. . . . Tom Lieb looking like a million bucks under the Florida tan.

Today's Guest Star
John Dietrich, Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Perhaps the best way to choose a football coach at Ohio State would be by direct popular vote at the November election, this would give every citizen and every tax payer a chance to have his say." . . . also, Columbus' 90-000 downtown, quarterbacks.

A Few On The House
Catcher Frank Hayes will get a belated Xmas present when he receives his 1941 contract from the Athletics. . . . Which northern sportsmen are writing frantically from the south. "Where in hell are those ducks?" Well, gents, they're staying right here in this mild eastern climate. . . . By the way, isn't Deb Garmis the first sacker ever to win a N. L. batting crown? . . . Max Baer's rebuttal

Christians Down Nazarenes, 25-18

The Christians continued undefeated in the Class C loop as they toppled the Nazarenes, 25 to 18, at the Memorial building Saturday. Brian was the top scorer for the winners, bagging 10 points, while D. Lodge helped out with six. Reischek looked best for the losers, collecting nine points while Appenison got six.

The Baptists trounced the Emmanuel 30 to 18 for an easy win. The Baptists scoring was well divided, Shasteen topping the list with eight points. Sell was the star of the contest, however, as he bagged 14 of the losers' 18 tallies.

The Methodists eked out a 14 to 11 triumph over Trinity in a slow contest. Hansell and C. Weigand led the winners with four points each while J. Weigand collected the same number for the losers.

The St. Paul cagers had a field day as they trimmed the Friends, 32 to 13. Julian led the assault garnering 10 points, while T. Alberts was close behind with eight. Koontz was high scorer for the Friends, hitting six.

BROWN STILL HAS INSIDE TRACK ON OHIO STATE POST

Oakes Of Colorado Interviewed By St. John; Harlow, Stiner Mentioned

NEW YORK, Dec. 30. — Paul Brown, Massillon High school football mentor, still was conceded the inside track in most quarters today for the Ohio State university coaching job despite the addition of new names to the list of prospects to succeed Francis A. Schmidt.

Brown is attending sessions of the National Collegiate Athletics Association here. So is L. W. St. John, Buckeye athletic director, who already has interviewed a number of coaching candidates, including Brown, and plans to talk with others.

Interviewed over the weekend St. John were Bernard (Bunny) Oakes, former Colorado coach, and Frank McCormick, director of athletics at Minnesota. The latter talk presumably dealt with the candidacy of Dr. George Hauser, Gopher line coach, for the Ohio state coachship.

Reports circulated that Dick Harlow, Harvard coach, was being considered by St. John while from the west coast came word that Lon Stiner, Oregon State grid mentor, was a candidate.

Schmidt, who resigned with most of his staff, also is attending the sessions. He asserted he had received no coaching offers although it was reported that Colorado and Dartmouth had him under consideration.

Columbia Winner In Maguire Loop

Columbia Street continued to bid for its second Mickey Maguire league crown as it trounced the St. Paul cagers, 32 to 5, at the Memorial building Saturday.

Solomon starred for the winners as he collected ten points while Kozar was close behind with eight. Fansote was the only St. Paul player to find the hoop, marking up all five points.

McKinley gained a 29 to 16 decision over Prospect. Ayres looked good for the McKinley crew, tallying eight points while Vissors held up the Prospect five with seven markers.

In an extremely low-scoring contest, Reilly edged out Fourth Street, 7 to 6. Minor tallied four points for the winners while Todd bagged the same total for the Fourth Street crew.

Australia Encourages Physical Fitness Among Its Civilians

(By United Press)
MELBOURNE — The Australian government has started a plan to encourage physical fitness among civilians, especially children and adolescents.

The plan, financed by the Commonwealth government, is being carried out alongside the country's preparations of men for war service.

Prime Minister Robert Menzies allotted $100,000 a year to the plan, a portion of which is used to maintain schools for physical education in leading universities to train the leaders for the physical fitness movement. The remainder supports a National Fitness Council in each state.

The best progress has been made in Victoria with the children between the ages of 14 and 20. Work is being done through local authorities, the council encouraged athletic clubs and youth organizations to enroll all youngsters in their activities.

Build Playgrounds
The council is also helping to prepare additional play fields. It has sponsored an organization to build a chain of hostels on walking and bicycle routes, where cheap lodging and free cooking facilities are obtainable. It is training leaders for free physical culture classes.

The state government has dedicated 500 acres near Melbourne as a national park to be developed by voluntary labor into a recreation center.

The council is also seeking an extension of state school medical and dental services to adolescents and opening schools after school hours as adolescent recreation.

Barons' Goalies Have Lots of Luck—All Bad

CLEVELAND — For a team that is the leading favorite to cop the American League hockey race, the Cleveland Barons are having more than their share of goalie trouble.

Mo Roberts, veteran Barons net tender, was forced to leave the Philadelphia game on Nov. 16 when he pulled a muscle in his knee. Cleveland then borrowed Alfie Moore from the New York Americans and he played in two games before spraining an ankle.

Harvey Teno, formerly with the Pittsburgh Hornets, then was drafted to hold off the enemy puck barrage. Between replacements Gordon Baxter, Barons practice goalie, was pressed into service.

WILDWOOD, N. J.—The Douglass brothers are beginning to distrust their good right arms. Bobby, 10, recently broke his for the third time. The fracture equalled the record of his brother, Freeman, who also broke his right arm on three different occasions.

I certainly am glad you told me about it!

Where War Struck in Pacific

Natives are laboring at the phosphate beds on the Pacific island of Nauru, former German possession now administered by Britain under a League of Nations mandate. According to reports, the undefended island was shelled by a ship flying the Japanese flag. The island is located in the Gilbert group, about 2200 miles southwest of Hawaii.

PRESIDENT FLAYS AXIS, SEES DEFEAT

Emphasizes Also That U. S. Faces Situation Comparable To War

directed toward war. Its sole purpose is to keep war away from our country and our people," by helping make possible British victory. Talk of plans for a present day American expeditionary force is an "untruth".

5—"There should be no appeasement and no American efforts, under present circumstances, to bring about a 'negotiated peace'."

6—"British strength is growing. I believe that the Axis powers are not going to win this war."

7—"Military necessities" will dictate the volume of future aid to Britain—an assertion some thought presaged upward revision of the present 50-50 formula.

Appeal To Industry, Labor
8—"The nation expects our defense industries to continue operation without interruption by strikes or lockouts, with management and worker adjusting any difference by voluntary or legal means."

9—"Evil forces are already within our own gates" seeking to foment dissension, sometimes with the unwitting help of American citizens.

10—"The redoubled defense effort would see no governmental failure to 'protect the economic well-being of all citizens.'"

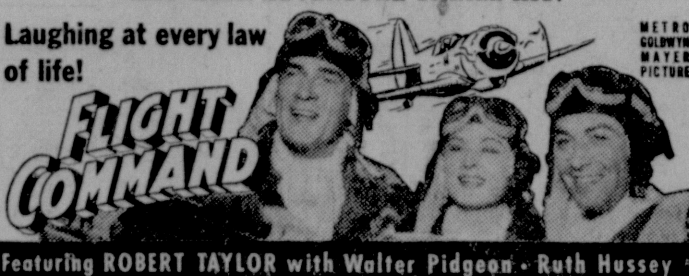

The President spoke from the quiet of the oval room at the White House where his mother, Mrs. Sarah D. Roosevelt, and some other guests followed his address. Actually his audience was numbered in the millions—one estimate was that between 50,000,000 and 80,000,000 persons heard him in the United States alone, where more than 500 radio stations carried the program. Rebroadcasts in Spanish, Portuguese and English carried his words to South America. The text and extensive summaries also went to the air waves to Europe and the Orient.
